Fayette Feed and Fertilizer Building
Fayetteville, Fayette County

Privately owned and currently home of New River Bikes, the one-story building known historically as the Fayette Feed Company is characterized by its Boomtown façade, clapboard siding, and wood double doors. Constructed in the 1880s to serve as a butcher shop, when Fayetteville was growing as an export and railroad town, this building symbolizes the prosperity of the merchant area in Fayetteville's historic district. For decades, the “Fayette Feed Co.” sign has remained untouched. Endangered by deterioration, the owner hopes to replace the roof and spruce up the building with the ultimate goal to return it to its historical appearance as a fertilizer and feed store both inside and outside while maintaining its current use. The owner also hopes to increase and promote historic preservation projects in Fayetteville's downtown historic district.
